Applicability: Functionality from 21 October 2026

Yes. On 21 October 2026, the Tax Administration published an update for issuing and fiscalising e-invoices.

What to check before choosing a free tool

Check the licence terms, the required account types and how you will organise your day-to-day work. A free price does not mean that the tool covers all your sales channels or replaces your business records.

Make a brief comparison: receipt, issuance, access by the responsible person, searching, storage and export of data. If you also deal with citizens, check that process separately rather than assume it's covered by choosing this service.

How to prepare this in your business

Compare the free and commercial solutions against your own list of tasks. For each function, indicate whether it is essential, useful or unnecessary, and what it costs to export data, add an additional user or handle a larger volume of work if charged.

Before making the switch, note where existing documents will remain and how you will access them. A good selection of tools also includes a plan for working after the change, not just activating a new account in the system.

Example of mixed sales

The business issues invoices to companies and private individuals. First, it lists both processes, then checks what MIKROeRAČUN handles and whether an additional tool is needed for the second part of the sale. This way, it avoids paying for an unnecessary package or discovering a shortfall only at the time of payment.

Specific next steps

1. Check the terms of use.
2. Open ePorezna Services MIKROeRAČUN.
3. Follow the updated instructions.

Most common mistakes

• Mixing the tool upgrade date with the statutory obligation date.

• To choose a tool without checking how it actually operates.

Limits of application

The service is for non-public-sector customers outside the scope of VAT, subject to the application's terms. Please check the B2C fiscalisation separately.
