Who registers the platform and the aggregator in JEER, and what do I check as a worker?

Applicability: JEER for platform work was established on 1 January 2024.

The platform registers itself and the aggregators it works with. The JEER documentation is not a substitute for your contract or your application for compulsory insurance.

Registration of business entities

The Ministry's instructions state that the digital platform registers itself in the Register, and its aggregators are registered by the platform. Upon registration, an identification number is assigned, and the registered aggregator can download the corresponding certificate. Access to the Register is via NIAS and the relevant authorisations.

Before commencing cooperation, request the entity's full name and clarification of its status. If you operate your own sole trader business directly with the platform, do not assume that this exempts you from any record-keeping obligations or automatically classifies you as an aggregator. The role, required data and reporting obligations should be determined according to the specific relationship.

The worker also checks his own report.

For the employment relationship, separately check the documentation for the HZMO registration. The Ministry states that the aggregator employing the worker must select the appropriate contract-of-employment code via the digital platform. Keep the contract, the registration confirmation and the employer's details. This Guide does not have access to your personal records and does not confirm individual enrolment.

Two different certificates

The partner presents the JEER registration number of their company. The worker still requests their own documentation regarding the employment relationship and insurance registration; the partner's business registration is not his personal registration.

Specific next steps

1. Identify the legal entity or sole trader who is the other party to the contract.
2. Request clarification of the registration and reference number if acting as an aggregator.
3. If you are an employee, check your contract and your enrolment with HZMO separately.
4. For your own business, clarify whether you will use a direct or indirect model and the associated obligations.

Most common mistakes

• Replace the JEER partner number with proof of personal employment.

• To claim that the public informational list of applications is a complete extract from the JEER.

Limits of application

Access to the Register is restricted by authentication; the directory in the Guide is not an official confirmation of enrolment nor a complete, up-to-date register.
