How can I verify an AI's response about a regulation?

For: Trading company · limited liability company · limited company

Practical business guidance · Reviewed: 2026-11-15

Applicability: Not tied to a statutory date

Seek an official source, the effective date and the conditions that apply to your case.

Check the claim, not the persuasive style.

Look up the exact name of the rule, the official source and the date of application. Open the source and compare whether it applies to the same business form, tax status, country, customer and period. A lengthy answer with links does not yet guarantee that the sources support the conclusion.

For an important decision, write down which question remains unresolved and refer it to the appropriate expert. AI can help organise data, but calling the answer "certain" does not replace professional verification.

How to prepare this in your business

To verify, isolate each claim individually: the amount, the deadline, the obligor and the exception. If the source confirms only one of these, do not assume the others are automatically established. In particular, check whether the model has conflated the announcement, the tool's availability and the actual obligation in the same response.

When making a business-critical decision, keep a record of the source and date of your verification. This will make it easier to determine later whether a rule, an original piece of information or an assumption about your business has changed.

An example of the incorrect application of a correct rule

The source refers to a sole trader, while the question concerns a limited liability company. Even if the quoted text is accurate, the conclusion for the company may be incorrect. Check to whom the rule applies before comparing amounts or deadlines.

Specific next steps

1. Open the source and the relevant rule.
2. Check the date, amendments and status.
3. Seek professional advice for a dilemma.

Most common mistakes

• Do not open the specified source.

• Accept the old date as proof of the current state.

Limits of application

Adapt the guideline to the circumstances of your business.
